Dear

Thank you for your phone call and email with regards the above site.

You are correct that teaching at the school has ceased as Woodlands and has merged with Tile Hill Wood school to create a new co-educational academy from this September.

It has been agreed that for the next 12 months the community sport facilities which operate on the site will remain available to the public.

During the next few months a strategic future use review of the site will take place as there are a number of options which need to be explored which includes a possible alternative educational use. If ultimately there is a decision to declare the site surplus by my education colleagues and therefore available to dispose of some or all of the site, we can make you aware.

I am happy for you to make contact on a regular basis but will make sure that your details are on our mailing list. In addition I will ask my colleague James Grant to forward some initial details of the next site we will be marketing, in a couple of months, which is Elms Farm off Wigston Road where we have recently submitted an outline planning application for a residential development of up to 150 dwellings.

Regards

Paul

Dear Mr Beesley

One of my work colleagues has noticed that teaching from the Woodlands Academy has recently ceased.

Please excuse the direct approach but I'd like to enquire if it the site was possibly available for acquisition?

Kind regards
